

Abstract

There is disclosed a method for treating diseases and disorders involving T cell activation and HIV-infection, using the p38 mitogen activated protein kinase (MAPK) signaling pathway as a target for intervention. There is further disclosed a use for guanyldihydrazone-substituted compounds to treat diseases and disorders related to T cell activation and HIV-infection.

5

10

15

20

25

30

35